The Word is also taken for a Client or Vassal, especially one that holds his Lands by serving his Lord on Horseback: But it is now become a Title of Honour, bestow'd by the King on Persons whom for their eminent Worth or Valour, she thinks fit to single out from the ordinary sort of Gentlemen; and to raise them to a higher Degree of Dignity. Of Knights there are many sorts, but the most usual amongst us are these, viz.

Knights Batchelors, the lowest, but most ancient Order of Knighthood, deriv'd from the Germans; amongst whom it was an old Custom, That as soon as the State judg'd any of their young Men fit to manage Arms, and to undertake Martial Enterprizes, then in a full Assembly or Council, either one of the Princes, or the Father, or some other Relations of the young Man, furnish'd him with a Shield and Javelin, as the Romans us'd to give the Virile Gown to those whom they thought capable of Publick Employment; so that thenceforth from part of a Private House, he was accounted a Member of the Commonwealth. It was also an ancient Ceremony to honour Men with the Girdle of Knighthood, which he who receiv'd was solemnly to go to Church, and offering his Sword upon the Altar, to vow himself to the Service of God: Afterwards it became customary for Kings to send their Sons to the Neighbouring Princes, to receive Knighthood at their Hands. In Process of Time, besides the Sword and Girdle, gilt Spurs were also added for greater Ornament; whence in Latin they are styl'd Equites Aurati. The Word Batchelors some derive from the French Bas Chevaliers, as it were Knights of the lowest Degree; and others from Battailler, to combat or fight: They are also called Knights simply, without any other Addition.

Knight Banneret, from the Dutch Word Bannether, i. e. Lord or Master of the Banner, is a Knight made in the Field, with the Ceremony of cutting off the Point of his Standard, and making it as it were a Banner. These Knights are allow'd to display their Arms in the King's Army; and such as are created under the Standard, by the King personally present, take Place of Baronets. This Dignity was conferr'd at first by the Kings of England and France, on such Gentlemen as signaliz'd their Valour in two Royal Battels, or such as had Ten Vassals, and Means to maintain a Troop of Horse at their own Charge. Some say the first Original of it was from King Edward III.

To Prognosticate, to fore-tell, conjecture, or guess.

Prognostication, The Act of prognosticating.

Prognosticator, one that prognosticates, or pretends to fore-tell future Events.

A Prognostick, a boding Sign or Token of something to come.

Prognosticks, or Prognostick Signs, (among Physicians) are Signs by which they discover what is like to become of a sick Person, with respect to Recovery, or Death.

Programma, an Edict or Proclamation set up in a publick Place; a Bill upon a Door; also a Bill posted up, or delivered by Hand, to give publick Notice of some Speech or Ceremony to be performed in a College, or School in an University.

Progress, a proceeding or going forward in a Business; also a Journey taken by a Prince or Nobleman for Pleasure.

Progression, a going on, in Arithmetick and Mathematicks, a Series or Train of Quantities which follow one another, and keep a certain Relation or Proportion among themselves.

Arithmetical Progression, or Continual Proportion Arithmetical, is a Consequence or Train of Numbers, or other Quantities in continued Arithmetical Proportion; which is when they proceed by equal Differences, either encreasing or decreasing.

Geometrical Progression, is the like Train of Numbers or Quantities in Geometrical Proportion continued, which is when they proceed by equal Ratio's, or Reasons, whether encreasing or decreasing. See Proportion.

Month of Progression. See Month.

Progressive, that proceeds or goes on; as Progressive Motion, Progressive Devotion, &c.

To Prohibit, to forbid, to bar or keep from.

Prohibited Commodities, such Goods as are not to be brought in, or convey'd out of the Nation.

Prohibitio de vasto directa parti, (Lat.) a Judicial Writ directed to the Tenant, forbidding him to make Waste upon the Land in Controversy during the Suit.

Prohibition, a forbidding, an Hinderance: In Astrology, it is when two Planets are applying to an Aspect, and in the mean while another Planet interposes either its Body or Aspect, so that the Matter which should have been brought to Conclusion is delay'd or hinder'd.

Prohibition, is also the Name of a Writ, to forbid any Court either Spiritual or Secular to proceed in a Cause there depending, upon intimation that the Cognizance of it does not belong to that Court: But it is now most usually taken for that Writ which lies for one impleaded in the Court Christian, for a Cause belonging to the Temporal Jurisdiction or Cognizance of the King's Court.

Prohibitory, that belongs to a Prohibition, or that forbids; as A Prohibitory Edict.

Project, Design, Purpose, Contrivance.

Projected, designed, contrived; in a Mathematical Sense, drawn upon a Plane.

Projectiles, or Projected Bodies, (in Philos.) such Bodies as being put into a violent Motion by any Force apply'd, are cast off from the Place where they receiv'd their Quantity of Motion, and afterwards move at a distance from it; as a Stone thrown out of one's Hands, or by a Sling, an Arrow shot from a Bow, a Bullet from a Gun, &c.

Projection, the Act of projecting: In Chymistry, it is when any Matter to be calcin'd or fulminated is put into a Crucible Spoonful after Spoonful: The pretended casting of the Powder of the Philosopher's Stone into a Crucible of melted Metal, in order to change it into Gold or Silver, is also call'd Projection.

Powder of Projection, a sort of Matter much boasted of by some Alchymists that pretend to be Masters of the Philosopher's Stone, who affirm it to be the Seed of Gold it self, and to have the Faculty of multiplying or encreasing Gold, when some small Quantity is us'd for that purpose.

Projection of the Sphere, (in Astron.) is a Description or drawing the Circles of the Sphere, or any parts of them, upon the Plane of some one Circle, as on the Horizon, Meridian, Equator, Ecliptick, &c. Thus Astrolabes, Quadrants, Sun-dials, Maps,

Maps, &c. are Projections of the Sphere; which are of three ſorts, viz. Gnomonick, Orthographick and Stereographick.

Gnomonick Projection, is that where the Plane of Projection is parallel to a great Circle of the Sphere, and where the Eye is ſuppoſ'd to be in the Center of the Earth.

Orthographick Projection, is that wherein the Eye is taken to be at an infinite diſtance from the Circle of Projection, ſo that all the Viſual Rays are parallel among themſelves, and perpendicular to the ſaid Circle.

Stereographick Projection, is that which ſuppoſes the Eye to be in the Pole of the Plane of Projection, 90 Degrees diſtant from, and perpendicular to it.

Projectour, one that projects, or contrives any Deſign.

Projecture, (in Architect.) the jutting or leaning out of any part of a Building, the coping of a Wall: All Margents that hang over beyond the Shaft of a Pillar are alſo termed Projectures. In Anatomy, Projecture is the ſame as Proceſs and Apophyſis; which See.

Projecturing Table. See Table.

Pro Indiviſo, (Law-Term) an Occupation or Poſſeſſion of Lands or Tenements belonging to two or more Perſons in common, ſo that none knows his reſpective Portion or Share; as it happens to Co-parceners before the partition or dividing of their Inheritance.

Prolabia, (in Anat.) the utmoſt prominent, or bunching out parts of the Lips.

Prolapſus Uteri. See Procidentia Uteri.

Prolegomena, (Gr.) Preparatory Diſcourſes, containing things of which the Reader is to be inform'd, to the end that he may better underſtand the Subject of a Book or particular Science; Prefaces, or Preambles.

Prolepſis, Anticipation, Prevention, Pre-occupation; a conceiving of things in Mind before-hand. In Grammar, a Figure of Conſtruction in which the Whole does duly agree with the Verb or Adjective, and then the Parts of the Whole are reduc'd to the ſame Verb or Adjective, with which they do not agree, as Duæ Aquilæ volaverunt, hæc ab Oriente, illa ab Occidente: It is call'd Anticipatio in Latin.

In Rhetorick, Prolepſis is a Figure whereby we prevent what another intends to alledge. It is divided into two Parts, viz. Hypophora, in which an Objection being ſtarted, the Speaker makes Anſwer to his own Demand; and Anthypophora, which is a contrary Inference, wherein an Objection is refuted by the oppoſing of a contrary Sentence.

Proleptical or Proleptick, belonging to the Figure Prolepſis.

Propoma, a Drink made of Wine, Honey, or Sugar.

Propoſitus, (Lat. Law-Term) the Declaration, or Deliverance, or Verdict of a Jury.

Proportion, Agreement, Agreeableneſs, Anſwerableneſs; Rule or Meaſure, the Relation that the Parts have among themſelves, and to the Whole. In Architecture, the relation that all the Work has to its Parts, and which every one ſeparately has to the Idea of the whole Building.

In Mathematicks, when two Quantities or Numbers are compar'd one to another, with reſpect to their Greatneſs or Smallneſs, ſuch a Compariſon is termed Ratio, Reaſon or Rate: But when more than two are compar'd, the Compariſon is generally call'd the Proportion, that they have one to another; altho' the Words Ratio and Proportion are often us'd promiſcuouſly.

Proportion or Relation in Quality, is either the Reſpect that the Reaſons of Numbers have one to another, or elſe that which their Differences have one to another: This Proportion is Arithmetical, Geometrical, or Harmonical.

Arithmetical Proportion, is when ſeveral Numbers differ according to an equal Difference; as 2, 4, 6, 8; ſo that 2 is the common Difference betwixt 2 and 4, 4 and 6, 6 and 8.

Geometrical Proportion, is when divers Numbers differ according to like Rate or Reaſon; i.e. when the Reaſons of Numbers compar'd together are equal: So 1, 2, 4, 8, which differ one from another by double Reaſon, are ſaid to differ by Geometrical Proportion; for as 1 is half 2, ſo 2 is half 4, and 4 half 8.

Harmonical Proportion, is that wherein the firſt Term is to the laſt in a Geometrical Reaſon, equal to that of the Difference of the two firſt to the Difference of the two laſt: Thus 2, 3, 6, are in Harmonick Proportion, becauſe the firſt Number 2 is to the laſt 6, as the Difference of the two firſt, viz. 1 is to the Difference of the two laſt, viz. 3.

Proportionable, agreeable to the Rules of Proportion.

Proportionality, a Likeneſs of Proportion.

Proportionals, proportional Numbers, or Quantities; i.e. ſuch as are in Mathematical Proportion: Thus if when four Numbers are conſider'd, it appears that the Firſt has as much Greatneſs or Smallneſs with reſpect to the Second, as the Third has with reſpect to the Fourth, thoſe four Numbers are call'd Proportionals.

Species, kind, sort; Money or Coin paid in Tale; also Images or Representations of Objects: In Logick, one of the five Predicables, viz. that which is predicated or declared after the Term Quid or What; as if it be asked, What is Socrates? Answer, He is a Man. In Metaphysicks, it is also an Idea, that relates to another more general one, to which it is subservient, having under it Individuals and Singulars.

In the Art of Physick, Species properly signify the simple Ingredients in the Druggists and Apothecaries Shops, out of which Compound Medicines are made: But the Writers of Pharmacy usually give that Name to some Aromatick or purging Powders, because they were formerly kept ready prepared in the Shops, to make up Electuaries, Tablets, Pills, &c.

In Algebra, Species, are those Letters, Characters, Notes, or Marks, which represent the Quantities in any Equation or Demonstration: Whence the Literal Algebra is often styled Specious Arithmetick, or Algebra in Species: This short and useful Method of Notation was first brought in by Francis Vieta about the Year 1590, and by it he made many new Discoveries in that admirable Art.

Visible Species, are those wonderfully fine superficial Images of Bodies, which the Light produces and draws in their due Proportion and Colours in the bottom of our Eyes.

Specification, a specifying, expressing, or declaring.

Specifical or Specifick, special, particular; that belongs to the Character of a thing, and distinguishes it from another of a different Species or kind.

Specifick Gravity, (in Philos.) is the appropriate and peculiar Gravity or Weight, that any Species of Natural Bodies have, and by which they may be plainly distinguished from all other Bodies of different kinds.

A Specifick or A Specifick Medicine, is a Remedy that has a peculiar Virtue against some Disease; as Quinquina, or the Jesuits Powder, has to cure Agues or Intermitting Feavers.

To Specify, to particularise, to mention in express Terms, to express in particular.

Specillum, (Lat.) a little Looking-glass: Also a Surgeon's Instrument commonly call'd a Probe.

Specimen, an Essay, Trial or Proof; a Model, or Pattern.

Specious, fair in Appearance, seemingly just and allowable, plausible.

Specious Algebra, the modern Algebra practised by Species or Letters of the Alphabet. See Algebra and Species.

Spectacle, a publick Shew or Sight.

Spectator, a Beholder or Looker on.

Spectatress, a Female Beholder.

Spectre, a frightful Apparition, a Vision, Ghost, or Spirit.

To Speculate, (properly to spy or watch in a high Tower) to contemplate, observe, or view; to consider seriously, to meditate upon.

Speculation the Act of Speculating, contemplating, &c. an Espial, a Notion: Also the Theory, or Study of an Art or Science without regard to the Practice.

Speculative, belonging to Speculation, apt to speculate, studious in the Observation of things Divine or Natural: Speculative is also more especially opposed to Practical.

Speculum, (Lat.) a Looking glass; also the Surface of an Opacous or dark Body, well polished and made capable of reflecting the sun beams falling on it: Also a kind of Table framed by Astrologers, after they have erected the Figure of a Nativity; containing the Planets and Cusps, with their Aspects, Terms, &c.

Speculum lucidum. See Septum lucidum.

Speculum Oculi, the Pupil, Apple, or Ball of the Eye.

Speculum Oris, an Instrument to screw up the Mouth, that the Surgeon may discern the diseased Parts of the Throat, or for the conveying in of Nourishment or Medicines.

Speedwell, an Herb otherwise call'd Fluellin.

Spikes or Spikes, (Sea-word) great and long Iron nails with flat Heads and of divers Lengths; some being a Foot or two long, and some ragged, so that they cannot be drawn out again: They are us'd in many parts of a Ship for the fastening of Timbers and Planks.

Spiking up of the Ordnance, is when a Coin or the like, is fasten'd with those Nails, close to the breech of the Carriages of the great Guns, to keep them firm up to the Ship's Sides.

Spell, (Sax.) a Word or Saying: But it is now commonly taken for a sort of Charm to drive away a Disease, by hanging a Sentence or Word written on a slip of Paper, about the Patient's Neck.

To Do a Spell, (in Sea-Language) signifies to do any Work by Turns, for a short Time, and then leave it. A fresh Spell, is when fresh Men come to Work, especially when the Rowers are reliev'd with another Gang: To Give a Spell, is to be ready to Work in such a one's room.

To Spell, to name or write down the Letters of a Syllable or Word: Among Sea-men, it is to let go the Sheats and Bowlings of a Sail, and Brace the Weather-Brace, that the Sail may lie loose in the Wind: The Word is chiefly us'd about the Missen-Sail; for there instead of Saying Take in the Missen and peek it up, they say in one Word, Spell the Missen.

Spelt, a kind of Corn growing in Italy and Flanders.

Spelter, a sort of imperfect Metal.

To Spend, to lay out, to consume or waste, to pass away time: Among Mariners, when a Ship's Mast or Yard is broken down by foul Weather, or any other Accident, they say, It is spent; but if it be done by the Enemies Shot in a Fight, the usual Phrase is, Such a Mast or Yard is shot by the Board.

Sperage or Asparagus, a well known Plant.

Spergula, (Lat.) an Herb call'd Spurry, or Frank; Wood-rose, a kind of Liver-wort.

Sperma, (Gr.) Sperm, the Seed of any Living-Creature; the Spawn or Milt in Fishes.

Sperma Ceti, (i. e. Whales Seed) an oily Substance drawn from the Brains of large Whales, and afterwards well purified: It is an excellent Remedy in several Diseases, and commonly call'd Parmacity.

Spermatical or Spermatick, belonging to, or full of Sperm.

Spermatick Parts and Vessels, (in Anat.) are those Arteries and Veins, which convey the Blood to the Testicles; also those Vessels thro' which the Seed passes: Also all whitish Parts of the Body, which by reason of their Colour, were anciently thought to be made of the Seed; as Bones, Sinews, Gristles, &c.

To

To Spermatize, to eject or throw out Sperm.

Spermatocele, a Rupture caus'd by the contraction or drawing together of the Veſſels that diſcharge the Seed, and its falling down into the Scrotum.

Sphaleciſmus, the gangreening or corrupting of any Part of the Body; alſo the blaſting of Trees.

Sphacelus, (in Surgery) a perfect Mortification of a part, when the Native Heat is wholly extinguiſh'd, and all Senſe taken away, not only in the Skin, Fleſh, Nerves and Arteries, but alſo in the very Bones: It is diſtinguiſh'd from a Gangreene, by the entire Corruption and Stench, it being alſo inſenſible of the Knife and Fire: 'Tis otherwiſe call'd Necroſis and Sideratio.

Sphæra, a Sphere or Globe, a Ball, Bowl, Rundle, or any thing that is round.

Sphæritis, a Plant that has round Heads.

Sphærocephalus, a ſort of Thiſtle having ſuch Heads.

Sphæromachia, a playing at Tennis, Hand balls or Bowls.

Sphagitides, the Jugular Veins according to ſome Anatomical Writers; being two great Veins on each ſide of the Throat, which nouriſh all the Parts of the Neck and Head.

Sphendamnos, the Maple tree, alſo a ſort of Hemp.

Sphenoidals Sutura, (in Anat.) a Suture or Seam in the Scull, that ſurrounds the Bone nam'd Os Sphenoides ſeperating it from the Os Occipitis, from the Os Petroſum, and from the Os Frontis.

Sphenoides, a Bone of the Cranium, common both to the Scull and upper Jaw. It is ſeated in the middle of the Baſis of the Scull, and is joyn'd to all the Bones of the Cranium by the Sphenoidal Suture, except in the middle of its Sides, where it is continued to the Oſſa Petroſa, as if they were but one Bone.

Sphenois. See Os Cuneiforme.

Sphenopalatinus, a Muſcle of the Gargareon or Wind-pipe Cover, which ariſes from a Proceſs of the Os Sphenoides, between the Ala Veſpertilionis and Proceſſus Styloides; and is inſerted to the hinder part of the Gargareon.

Sphenopharyngæus, a pair of Muſcles that take riſe from the inner Wing of the Os Cuneiforme, and paſs obliquely downwards into the Gullet, which they ſerve to widen.

Sphenopterygopalatinus. See Pterygopalatinus.

Sphere, any ſolid round Body, which according to Geometrical Rules, is made by the Circumvolution or turning of a Semi-circle about its Diameter. It is alſo figuratively taken for the compaſs or reach of one's Power or Knowledge.

In Aſtronomy, Sphere ſignifies the whole Frame of the World, as being of a Spherical or round Figure, and more ſtrictly the Primum Mobile which encloſes all the other Orbs and Heavenly Bodies: The Sphere is alſo conſidered with reſpect to its three different Poſitions, viz. Right, Oblique and Parallel.

A Right or Direct Sphere, is when both the Poles of the World are in the Horizon, and the Equinoctial paſſes thro' the Zenith, ſo that the Equator and all its Parallels, ſuch as the Tropicks and Polar Circles make right Angles with the Horizon, and are divided by it into two equal Parts; whence it is that the Sun, Moon and Stars, aſcend directly above, and deſcend directly below the Horizon; as at the Iſland of St. Lawrence, and all other Places ſituated juſt under the Equinoctial Line.

An Oblique Sphere, is ſuch a Situation of the World, as that the Axis of it inclines obliquely or a-ſlaunt to one of the Sides of the Horizon; one of the Poles being raiſed any Number of Degrees leſs than 90 above it, and the other depreſſed as much below it; ſo that the Sun and Stars aſcend and deſcend obliquely, and ſome of them never aſcend at all; This Poſition happens to all Places wide of the Equator.

A Parallel Sphere, is when one Pole is in the Zenith, and the other in the Nadir, the Equator falling in with the Horizon, and all the Parallels of the Equator, being alſo parallel to the Horizon: In this Caſe all the Stars in their Courſe, neither aſcend above the Horizon, nor deſcend below it; but move in a Road parallel to it: This Poſition is peculiar to thoſe Places that lie directly under the North and South Pole.

Sphere or Material Sphere, a Mathematical Inſtrument made of Silver or Braſs hoops or Rings, repreſenting the Principal Circles of the Sphere, for the more eaſy conceiving the Motions of the Heavens and the true Situation of the Earth; which is alſo termed an Armillary Sphere.

Sphere of Activity of any Natural Body, is that determinate Space or Extent all round about it, to which and no farther the Effluviums or flowing Particles continually ſent forth from that Body, do reach, and where they operate according to their Nature: Thus where ever a Neele is plac'd ſo as that it can be mov'd by a Load ſtone, it may be ſaid, To be within the Sphere of Activity of the Stone.

Sphere of a Planet, (in Aſtron.) the Orb or Compaſs, wherein it is conceived to move.

Sphere of a Planet's Activity, (in Aſtrol.) the extention of a Planet's Light and Virtue, ſo far as it is capable of making or receiving a Platick Aſpect. See Platick.

Spherical or Spherick, belonging to or round like a Sphere.

Spherical Numbers. See Circular Numbers.

Spherick Geometry or Projection, is the Art of deſcribing on a Plane the Circles of the Sphere, or any parts of them in their juſt Poſition and Proportion; and of meaſuring their Arches and Angles when projected.

Spherick or Spherical Triangles. See Triangles.

Spheroid, (in Geom.) a Solid Figure, made from the Plain of a Semi-Ellipſis, turned about one of its Axes: If the Circumvolution or Rolling be perform'd about the longeſt Axis, it is call'd an Oblong Spheroid, but if about the ſhorteſt, 'tis termed a Prolate Spheroid; ſuch is the Figure of the Planets, and of the Globe of our Earth.

Sphincter, (in Anat.) i. e. Binder, a Name common to ſeveral Muſcles that bind, ſtraiten, or draw together the Anus, Bladder, Gullet, &c.

Sphincter Ani, a large, thick, fleſhy Muſcle, that encompaſſes the Anus, or end of the ſtrait Gut, and ſerves to keep in the Excrement; being much larger in Man than in other Animals, in regard that a greater Force is requiſite for that purpoſe, by reaſon of the upright Poſition of their Bodies.

Sphincter Gulæ. Oeſephagæus Gulæ.

Sphincter Vaginæ, a Muſcle that lies immediately under the Clitoris, and ſtraitens the Vagina, or Neck of the Womb, which it encloſes with Circular Fibres three Fingers in breadth.

Sphincter Veſicæ, a Muſcle ſeated in the upper part of the Neck of the Bladder, immediately above the Glandulæ Proſtatæ; ſo that being ſtraiten'd, it hinders the involuntary diſcharge of the Urine.

Sphingium, a Monkey.

Sphinx, a Beaſt like an Ape, a Monkey, a Marmolet: Alſo a monſtrous Witch, or Hag, near Thebes, ſaid to have had a Head and Face like a Girl, the reſt of the Body like a Dog, the Wings of a Bird, and Claws of a Lion; ſhe put forth Riddles, and kill'd thoſe Paſſengers that could not expound them.

Sphyngyle, (Gr.) the Andever or Whirl-worm; an Inſect.

Sphondy-

Digitized by Google

Sphondylium or Spondylium. Holy Ghost's Root or Cow-Parsnip; also a Vertebra, or Turning-joynt of the Back Bone.

Sphygmica, that part of Physick which treats of, or else Medicines that move the Pulses.

Sphygmus, the Pulse, the beating of the Heart and Arteries.

Sphyræna, the Sea-Pike or Spit-fish.

Spica, (Lat.) the Ear of Corn, the long tops of Herbs, as of Lavender, &c. Spica Celtica, a kind of Moss, call'd Wolves-claw. Spica Cilissa, the Saffron-flower.

Spica Indica. See Nardus Indica.

Spica Nardi, Lavendar-spike, Spike-nard.

Spice, the beginning or remains of a Distemper; also several sorts of Indian Drugs or Grocery Ware; as Cinnamon, Cloves, Mace, &c.

Spicery, a Place where Spices are kept.

Spicknel or Spignel, an Herb good against Cartarrhs and Rheums, which is otherwise call'd Mew, Baldmony and Bear wort.

Spider, a well known Insect, of which there is a monstrous sort in the Island of Nevis in America, with ten Feet that have every one four Joynts, and are horny at the ends; so that when they crawl, their Feet are spread as wide as a Man's Hand: Those Spiders have each two solid, sharp, black Tushes, big enough for a Tooth-picker, and often apply'd to that Use: They prey upon Flies, and other Vermin of the like Nature, and their Web are so strong, that a small Bird can scarce break thro' them.

Spigurnel, a Term anciently us'd for the Sealer of the King's Writs; which Office together with the Sergeancy of the King's Chappel John de Bohun resign'd to K. Edward I.

Spike or Spiknard, a sweet smelling Plant, the Oil of which is much us'd in Physick, being of a warming and ripening Quality.

Spikes, a Sea-Word. See Specks.

Spiked, sharp pointed: Among Mariners, the Touch hole of a Gun is said To be Spiked, when Nails are purposely driven into it, so that no Use can be made of that Gun by an Enemy.

Spina, (Lat.) a Thorn or Prickle, a Prickle or Bristle of an Hedg hog; also the Spine or Chine-bone of the Back.

Spina acuta, the White-Thorn or Haw-thorn; also part of the Shoulder-blade, so call'd by some Anatomical Writers.

Spina alba or Spina regia, the wild Artichoke, or Ladies Thistle. Spina appendix, the Gooseberry-bush. Spina Christi or Spina Judaica, Christ's Thorn. Spina Fullonia, Fullers Teazel. Spina peregrina, Globe Thistle, or Cotton-Thistle.

Spina Dorsi, (in Anat.) the hinder Prominences or Knobs, or the Vertebræ or Turning joynts of the Back. Spina Sacra, the Rump.

Spina Dentosa, an Ulceration in which the Bones are eaten by a Malignant Humour, without any Pain of the Periosteum or Skin that covers the Bone; whence often follows a necessity of cutting off the diseased Part.

Spinachia, Spinage, an Herb of great Request in Cookery, both for Broths and Sallets; it is also good for Feavers, and loosens the Belly.

Spinalis Colli, (in Anat.) a Muscle so call'd from its accompanying the Spines of the Neck: It arises from the five upper Transverse Processes of Vertebræ of the Chest, as also from the lower ones of the Neck; and has a large Insertion to the lower part of the Vertebræ of the Neck Side-ways.

Spinalis Lumborum See Sacer.

Spinalis Medulla. See Medulla Spinalis.

Spinati, certain Muscles, whose Office is to stretch out and send the Body backward, and to move it obliquely.

Spindle, an Instrument us'd in Spinning: Also the main Body of the Capstan or Draw-beam of a Ship. Also the Axis of the Wheel of a Clock or Watch, is call'd the Spindle, and its ends the Pivets.

Spindle-Tree or Prick-Timber, a kind of Shrub.

Spine, (Lat.) the Back-bone, or long-joynted Chine-bone that goes down the Back; also the upper part of the Os Pectinis, or Share bone. See Pectinis Os.

Spinellus, (Lat.) the Spinel-Ruby a precious Stone somewhat softer, and not so bright as the true Ruby.

Spincola or Spinæa, a kind of Rose.

Spinet, a Musical Instrument, a sort of small Harpsichord.

Spingard, (old Word) a kind of Brass-Gun.

Spink, a Bird otherwise call'd a Chaffinch.

Spinner, a Person that spins; also a small sort of harmless Spider.

† Spinosity, (Lat.) intricate Point, Difficulty.

Spinster, (Law-Term) a Title usually given to all unmarried Women from the Viscount's Daughter downward in all Deeds, Bonds, &c. Spinning being figuratively taken for all sorts of Work that Maids or unmarried Women are supposed to be employ'd in.

Spinturnix, (Gr.) a Bird that anciently us'd to come to the Altars, and carry'd away a Live-coal, as a Token of ill Luck, or burning to the House where it lighted: Also a four-footed Beast with Wings like the Sphinx.

Spinus, (Lat.) the Sloe tree, or Bullace-tree; Buck-Thorn, or Snag-tree; also a Bird call'd a Siskin.

Spiral or Spiral Line, (in Geom.) a crooked Line that winds and turns round, seeming to be almost a Circle, only it does not meet or run again into its self; but keeps on at a proportionate Distance; like the coiling of a Rope, or the folds of a Serpent, when she lies close in several turns; whence it is sometimes call'd a Serpentine Line and Helix.

Proportional Spirals, are such Spiral Lines as the Rhumb lines on the Terrestrial Globe.

Spiration, breathing.

Spire, a Steeple that rises tapering by degrees, and ends in a sharp Point at the top; also a heap of Corn or Grass.

To Spire, to grow up into an Ear, as Corn does.

Spirit, (Lat.) an immaterial Being, a Substance distinct from Matter: Also Virtue or supernatural Power that enlivens the Soul, or the Soul it self, the Ghost of a dead Body: It is also taken for Genius, Disposition, or Nature; Wit, Liveliness, Courage, Pride, &c.

Spirit, or Mercury, (among Chymists) is one of the five Principles that may be separated from a mixt Body by Fire: It is subtil, light, piercing and active, and has its Particles in a very quick Motion; as being probably that which causes the growth and encrease of all Bodies.

This Principle, when it comes over wrapt up as it were in a little Oil, is call'd an Ardent Spirit, such as Spirit of Wine; and therefore should rather be termed an Exalted Oil: Whence it has in it a little Volatile Salt dissolved, 'tis call'd a Volatile Spirit; as the Spirit of Harts horn, Urine, &c. If it be mixt with Acid Salts, its Volatility is then check'd, and 'tis styl'd an Acid or Fixed Spirit; as Spirit of Salt, Vitriol, Allum, &c.

Spirit of Nitre, is made by mingling one part of Salt-peter with three times as much Potters Earth dried, and distilling the Mixture in a large Earthen Earthen Retort ſet in a cloſe Reverberatory Fire. This Spirit is the beſt Aqua fortis, and is chiefly us'd for the diſſolving of Metals; but when dulcity'd or ſweeten'd, it is a good Medicine to be taken inwardly in many Caſes.

Spirit of Salt, is made by drying and powdering the Salt, and then mixing it with thrice its Weight of Potters Earth powder'd: Afterwards a Paſte is made of theſe with a little Rain-Water, which being roll'd up into little Balls or Pellets about as big as Nuts, is to be diſtilled according to Art.

Spirit of Salt dulcified, is when equal Parts of this Acid Spirit and Spirit of Wine are mingled together, and digeſted by a gentle heat for about three or four Days.

Spirit of Sulphur, is only the Acid part of Sulphur or Brimſtone changed into a Liquor by Means of Fire: It is commonly call'd Oil of Sulphur per Campanam, from the Veſſel's ſhape, being like a Glaſs bell, in which it is uſually drawn.

Spirit of Wine. See Wine.

Univerſal Spirit, is the firſt Principle of Chymiſtry, that can be admitted for the Compoſition of Mixt Bodies; which being ſpread out thro' all the World, produces different Things, according to the ſeveral Matrices or Pores of the Earth, in which it ſettles.

Spirits, (in the Body of Living-Creatures) were reckon'd of three Sorts, viz. The Animal Spirits in the Brain, the Vital in the Herat, and the Natural in the Liver: But modern Authors diſtinguiſh them only into two kinds, the Animal in the Brain, and the Vital or Natural in the Maſs of Blood.

The Animal Spirits, are a very thin Liquor, which diſtilling from the Blood in the outward or Barky Subſtance of the Brain, are there exalted into Spirit; from whence being convey'd into the Nerves and Spinal Marrow, they perform in thoſe Parts all the Actions of Senſe and Motion.

The Vital or Natural Spirits, are the moſt ſubtil parts of the Blood, which cauſe it to act and ferment; ſo as to make it fit for Nouriſhment.

To Spirit away Children, is to entice or ſteal them privily from their Parents or Relations in order to convey them beyond Sea, eſpecially to the Plantations in the Weſt Indies.

Spiritual, that conſiſts of Spirit without Matter; alſo devout, Religious, or Godly: Alſo the ſame as Eccleſiaſtical oppoſed to Temporal; as a Spiritual Living, or Benefice, that belongs to a Clergy-man.

Spiritualties, the Profits which a Biſhop receives from his Spiritual Livings, and not as a Temporal Lord; which are the Revenues that ariſe from his Viſitations, the Ordaining and Inſtituting of Prieſts, Preſtation money, &c. Theſe are uſually oppoſed to Temporalities; which ſee.

Spiritualization, (in Chymiſtry) an extracting or drawing of the moſt pure and ſubtil Spirits out of Natural Bodies.

To Spiritualize, to explain a Paſſage of an Author in a ſpiritual manner, to give it a Godly or Myſtical ſenſe: Among Chymiſts to reduce a compact mixt Body into the Principle call'd Spirit.

Spirituous, full of Spirits

Spiſſitude or Spiſſity, a Philoſophical Word for Thickneſs or Groſsneſs.

Spit-deep, (among Husband-men) is as much Ground as may be digged up at once with a Spade.

Spitchcock-Eel, a ſort of large Eel that is uſually roaſted.

Spithama, (Gr.) the Meaſure of a Span, from the Thumb's end to the end of the little Finger.

Spitter, one that ſpits and ſpawls: Among Hunters, a red Male Deer, near two Years old, whoſe Horns begin to grow up ſharp and ſpit-wiſe; It is alſo call'd a Brocket or Pricket.

Spittle-Houſe. See Hoſpital.

Splanchnica, Medicines that are proper againſt Diſeaſes of the Bowels.

Splanchnology, a Diſcourſe, Treatiſe, or Deſcription of the Entrails of a Humane Body.

Splanchnon, an Entrail, or Bowel.

To Splat a Pike, a Term us'd in Carving at Table, for to cut it up.

Splay that Bream, i. e. cut up that Fiſh.

Splaying of the Shoulder, a Diſeaſe in Horſes occaſioned by ſome Slip, ſo that the Shoulder parts from the Breaſt, and leaves a rift or rent in the film under the Skin; which makes the Horſe trail his Legs after him.

Splen or Lien, the Spleen or Milt, a Bowel under the left ſhort Ribs over againſt the Liver, being a Receptacle for the Salt and earthy Dregs of the Blood; where by the help of the Animal Spirits, they are refin'd, and returning to the Blood, promote its farther Fermentation.

Spleen, is alſo a Diſtemper in that Part, and figuratively taken for Spite, Hatred, or Grudge.

Spleen-wort, an Herb that takes Name from its Quality; as being very efficacious in Diſeaſes of the Spleen: It is otherwiſe call'd Ceterach and Milt-waſte.

Spleget, a kind of Tent for a Wound. See Pledget.

Splendent, (Lat.) ſhining, or bright.

Splendid, glorious, magnificent, ſtately, noble.

Splendour, Brightneſs, great Light, as of the Sun and Stars; alſo Glory, Magnificence, Pomp.

Splenetick, belonging to the Spleen; alſo Spleen-ſick, troubled with a Diſeaſe or ill Humours in that Part.

Splenium, a long Plaiſter or Cloth to be laid on the Body of one that is ſick of the Spleen. In Surgery, a Bolſter made of Linnen ſeveral times doubled, even to the thickneſs of the Spleen, which is us'd upon Wounds, Ulcers, and Fractures: Alſo the Herb call'd large Spleen wort.

Spleniatick Artery, (according to ſome Anatomiſts) is the greateſt Branch of the Cæliaca, that goes from thence to the Spleen, and ends in it.

Splenical Vena, the left Branch of the Vena Portæ, which is beſtowed upon the Stomach and Caul, a part of the Gut Colon, and the Spleen.

Splenical Medicines, ſuch Remedies as are proper to remove the Diſtempers and ſtoppages of the Spleen.

Splenii Muſculi, certain Muſcles ſo call'd from their Figure ſomewhat reſembling an Ox's Spleen: They ariſe partly from the five lower Vertebræ of the Neck, and partly from the points of five of the upper Vertebræ of the Cheſt: The Fibres of theſe Muſcles are faſten'd to the hinder part of the Head, and ſerve to draw it backwards.

Splent, a kind of hard Swelling without Pain, that grows on the Bone of a Horſe's Leg.

Splents or Splints, the pieces of a broken Bone; Alſo certain flat pieces of Wood us'd by Surgeons in the binding up of broken Limbs; alſo Harneſs or Armour for the Arms

Splice, a Word us'd by Seamen, when to make an Eye at the end of any Rope, the ends of the Strands or ſeveral Twiſts, are drawn into thoſe of the other Rope's Strands with a Tool call'd a Fidd, and this is termed a round Splice: There is alſo another ſort, when the Strands of either Rope are put one into another, at a good Diſtance from the Ends, and thoſe Ends left out unſpliced.

To Splice, to make faſt the ends of Ropes one into another, by opening the Strands or Twiſts at the ends of both Ropes, and then with a Fidd, to lay every Strand in order one into another. Among Husband-men, Splicing, is a particular way of Grafting; when the ſtock of one Tree and the top of another are cut ſloping and faſten'd together.

To Split, to cleave or cut aſunder; to perplex a Cauſe or Law-Suit, by raiſing new Difficulties: Among Sea-men, a Sail is ſaid To be Spilt, when it is blown down.

Spodium, (Gr.) the Cinders after the melting of Iron or Braſs; alſo a ſort of Soot, which riſing from tried Braſs, falls down to the bottom, whereas Pompholyx ſtill flies upwards: It is alſo taken for burnt Ivory, or the black Pieces which remain after Diſtillation, calcined in an open Fire, till they become White.

Spoliation, (Lat.) properly a robbing or ſpoiling, the Name of a Writ that lies in the Spiritual Court, for one Incumbent againſt another, when the Right of Patronage does not come into Debate.

Spondæus or Spondee, (Gr.) in Grammar, a Foot of a Greek or Latin Verſe, conſiſting of two long Syllables; as Cœlum.

Spondylis, a kind of Serpent.

Spondylion. See Sphondylion.

Spondylus, a Knuckle, or Turning joynt of the Chine or Back bone; alſo the head of the Artichoke-thiſtle; alſo the whirl of a Spindle.

Spongia, Spunge, a kind of Sea moſs growing on the Rocks.

Spongites, a Stone found in Spunges.

Spongoidea Oſſa, (in Anat.) the ſame with the Cribriform, or Sieve like Bones. See Ethmoides.

Sponk. See Spunk.

Sponſion, (Lat.) a Promiſe, Engagement, or Obligation.

Sponſor, Surety, an Undertaker for another, a God-father.

Spontaneous, voluntary, free, that acts of its own accord.

Spontaneous Action. See Action.

Spooning or Spooning before the Wind, (among Mariners) is when a Ship being under Sail at Sea, is put right before the Wind; which is generally done in ſome great Storm, when they find the Ship too weak to indure the lying under the Sea; and when there is Danger leſt ſhe ſhould bring her Maſts by the board, by her violent Seeling or rolling about, and ſo founder; they uſually ſet up the Fore ſail, to make her go the ſteadier, which is termed Spooning the Fore Sail.

Sporades, (Gr.) certain Illands that lie ſcatter'd up and down in the Egean Sea or Archipelago: Among ſtronomers, ſuch Stars as were never as yet rank'd in any particular Conſtellation, nor had peculiar Names given them.

Syſtem, properly ſignifies a regular orderly Collection, or Compoſition of many things together; a compleat Treatiſe, or Body of any Art or Science.

Syſtem of Philoſophy, is a regular Collection of the Principles and Parts of that Science into one Body, and a treating of them Dogmatically, or in a Scholaſtical Method; which is termed The Syſtematical Way, in contradiſtinction to the Way of Eſſay, in which the Writer delivers himſelf more looſely, freely and modeſtly.

Syſtem of the World, (among Aſtronomers) is taken for the general Fabrick, Conſtitution and Harmony of the Univerſe, or any orderly Repreſentation of it according to ſome noted Hypotheſis, in which the Heavenly Bodies are ſo diſpos'd among themſelves, as their Situation, Order, Motions and Properties may in ſuch an Author's Opinion beſt anſwer Appearances and Philoſophical Demonſtrations. Of theſe Syſtems the moſt conſiderable were advanc'd by Ptolemy, Copernicus and Tycho Brahe.

The Ptolemaick Syſtem, is that wherein the Globe of the Earth and Sea is fixed as the Center of the Univerſe, whilſt the Sun, Moon and Stars perform their Courſe round it every Day, each in their ſeveral Orbits and different Diſtances from it: So that the Moon is plac'd neareſt the Earth, next to the Moon Mercury, then Venus, the Sun, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn; beyond thoſe, the Firmament or Orb of the fixed Stars, the Second Cryſtalline Heaven, the Firſt Cryſtalline; and Laſt of all that call'd Primum Mobile, or the Firſt Mover.

The Copernican Syſtem, the ſame with the moſt ancient or Pythagorean Syſtem, reviv'd by Nicholas Copernicus, is now much improv'd, and generally maintain'd by Aſtronomers. In this Syſtem, the Sun is ſuppoſed to be plac'd in the Center, or middle of the World; next to him, Mercury in about three Months Time makes his Ellipſis, or Oval Courſe; next to Mercury, is the Orbit of Venus, whoſe Period is 7½ Months: Next to Venus, our Earth and its Attendant the Moon perform a joynt Courſe, and meaſure out the Yearly Period: Next to the Earth, Mars alone, without any viſible Satellites, or Guard, rolls about the ſame Center in about two Years Time: Next to Mars, (tho' at a vaſt diſtance) Jupiter with his four remarkable Satellites, or Secondaries, takes his round in twelve Years: And laſtly, Saturn accompany'd with his five little Moons, is ſaid to deſcribe the moſt remote, or fartheſt Orbit in the ſpace of 30 Years.

The Syſtem of Tycho Brahe, was propos'd by a famous Daniſh Noble-man of that Name, who makes the Earth the Center of both the Luminaries, and of the Orb of fixed Stars; but the Sun the Center of the other four Planets, which he counts Eccentrick to the Earth, and conſtantly moving in the liquid Æther, or Sky, about the Sun, &c.

In Muſick, Syſtem is an extent of a certain number of Chords, having its Bounds toward the Grave and Acute; which has been differently determined by the different Progreſs made in that Science, and according to the different Diviſions of the Monochord.

The Solar Syſtem, (in the New Aſtronomy) is the joynt Union or orderly Diſpoſition of all the Planets that move round the Sun as their Center, in determined Orbits, and never go farther from it than their proper and uſual Bounds.

Syſtema, (Gr.) a Syſtem, the Body of a Science, the compaſs of a Song: In Surgery, it is the ſame as Syntheſis; which See.

thro' them both. Among Aſtrologers, Syzygie is taken for the Intercourſe of the Planets one with another, or the mingling together of their Beams, either by Bodily Conjunction, or other Aſpects.

Virus, (Lat.) Poiſon, Venom; alſo a rammiſh Smell, as of the Arm pits: Alſo a kind of watery Matter, whitiſh, yellowiſh and greeniſh at the ſame time, which iſſues out of Ulcers and ſtinks very much; being endued with eating and malignant Qualites.

Vis, (Lat.) Force, Violence, Might, Power: In a Law-ſenſe, it alſo ſignifies Force, as Vi & Armis, i. e. by Force of Arms; and this Force is five-fold, viz. Vis Ablativa. Compulſiva, Expulſiva, Inquietativa, & Turbativa.

Vis Ablativa, is the forcible taking away of moveable Things. Vis Compulſiva, is that Force whereby a Man is compelled to do that, which otherwiſe he would not do of his own free Will. Vis Expulſiva, is when one is caſt out of his Poſſeſſion by Force and Arms. Vis Inquietativa, is when one Man will not ſuffer another quietly to enjoy his Right, or to do any thing within his own Limits, or Bounds. Vis Turbativa, is that Diſturbance which is given to a Man in his Poſſeſſion, as when two ſtrive to poſſeſs the ſame thing: And from all theſe ſome ſort of Action will ariſe.

Vis Centrifuga, (in Philoſ.) is the Force by which any Natural Body rolling, or turning round about another, endeavours to fly off from the Axis of the Motion, in a Tangent to that Curve.

Vis Centripeta, is that Force by which a Body, from any Cauſe whatever tends towards any Point as to its Center: Of this kind is Gravity, whereby Bodies tend towards the Center of the Earth; and ſuch is the Magnetical Force by which Iron tends towards the Center of the Magnet.

The Quantity of this Centripetal Force is of three kinds, viz. Abſoluta, Acceleratrix, and Motrix.

Vis Centripetæ Quantitatis Abſoluta, is its Meaſure greater or leſs, according to the efficacy of the Cauſe that produces it, and which exerts it ſelf on all Bodies in the Regions round about; as the Magnetical Virtue in ſome Magnets is greater than in others of the ſame Dimenſions.

Vis Centripetæ Quantitas Acceleratrix, is its Meaſure proportionable to the Swiftneſs which it produces in a given Time: Thus the power of a Loadſtone is greater at a leſs, and leſſer at a greater diſtance from the Stone.

Vis Centripetæ Quantitas Motrix, is its Meaſure proportionable to the Motion which it cauſes in a given time: As the Weight is greater in a greater Body and leſs in a leſſer; and in the ſame Body, it is greater near the Earth, and leſs in remote Regions.

Vis impreſſa, is an Impulſe, Force, or Action, communicated to and exerciſed upon any Body, in order to change its preſent State, either of Reſt or Motion uniformly forward in a Right-Line.

Vis inſita Materiæ, or Vis Inertiæ, is the bare Power of Reſiſtance only, by which every Body, as much as it may, endeavours to continue in that State in which it is, either of Reſt or Motion; likewiſe uniformly forward in a Right Line.

Vis Motrix, is the Power which produces the Motion of a Body from place to place. Thus Gravity is a Vis Motrix downwards, or towards the Center of the Earth.
